

How to Build an Easy Croquet Club Website

To help promote croquet in general, and your croquet club in particular, the United States Croquet Association would like every USCA croquet club to have a website. Many clubs already have one, but if your club does not, here's an easy and free way to build one.

The intent of this easy website is to show people that your club exists, and how to contact it. You can do more things with the website, if you are more ambitious, but this easy one-page website will get your club started.

There are many ways to build a website, and if you have one you like, please use it. If you don't, this will show you how to build one using Weebly. Weebly is one of the easiest ways to build and maintain a website. Everything is very simple to do, even if you haven't a clue how websites work.

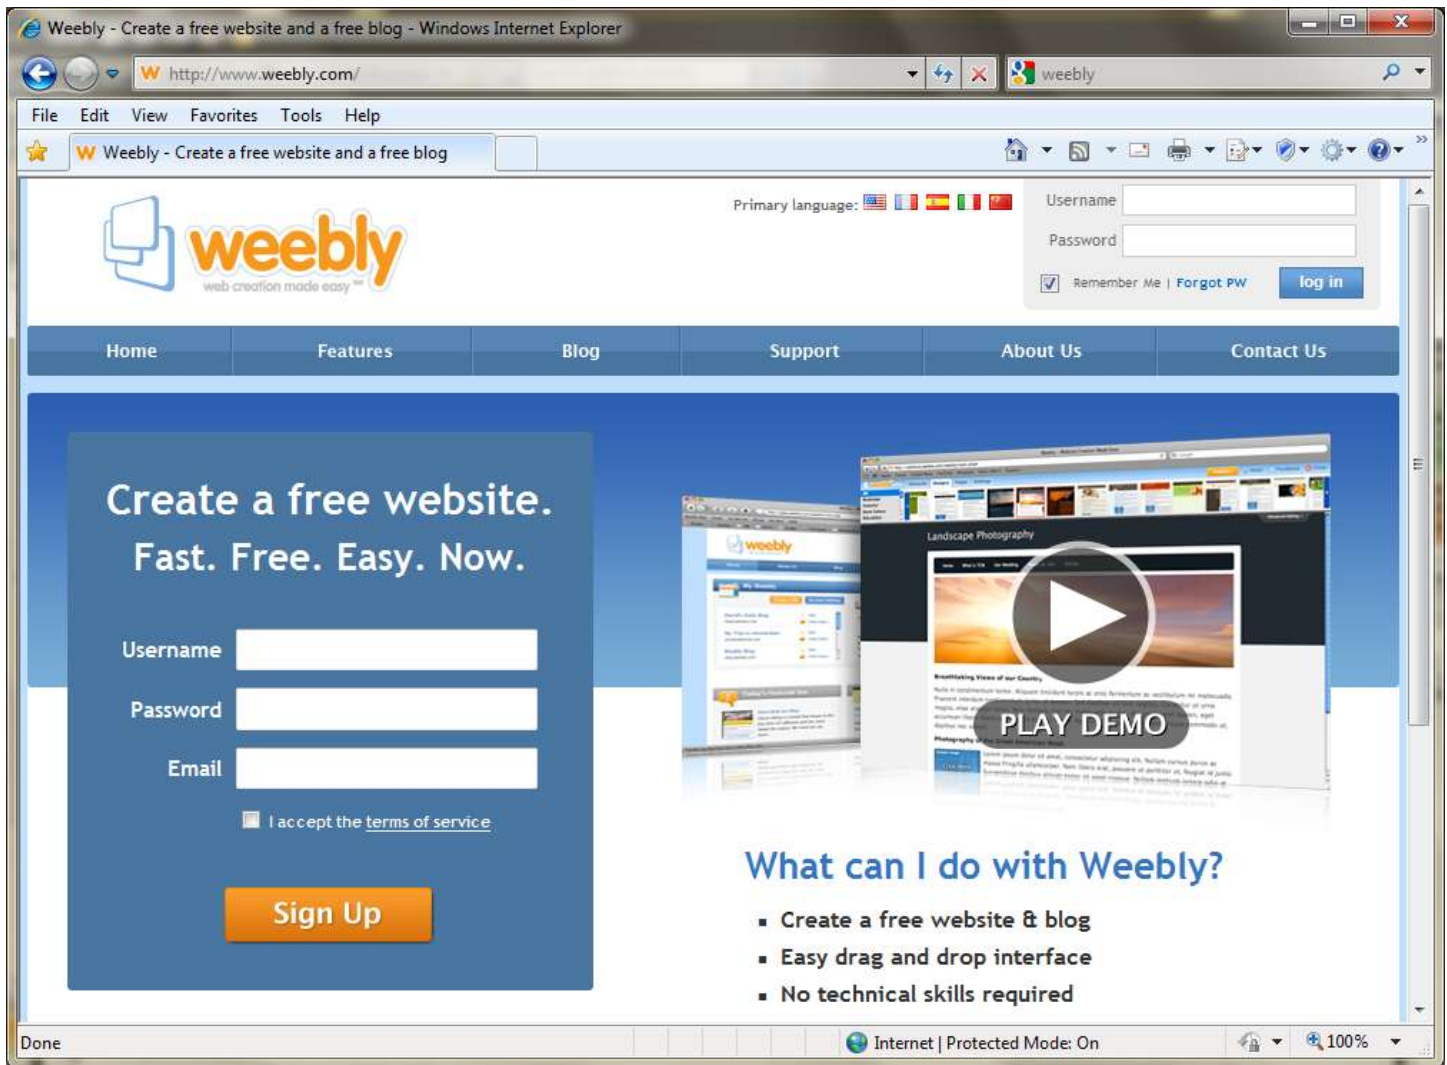

So here are the simple steps that take about half an hour to do. If you have any questions, please contact Leo Nikora by e-mail at leo@maui.net.

Let's see how Joe Bagadonuts would build a simple one-page website for the Unknown Croquet Club in Anywhere, ST. Joe would be the web master for the website.

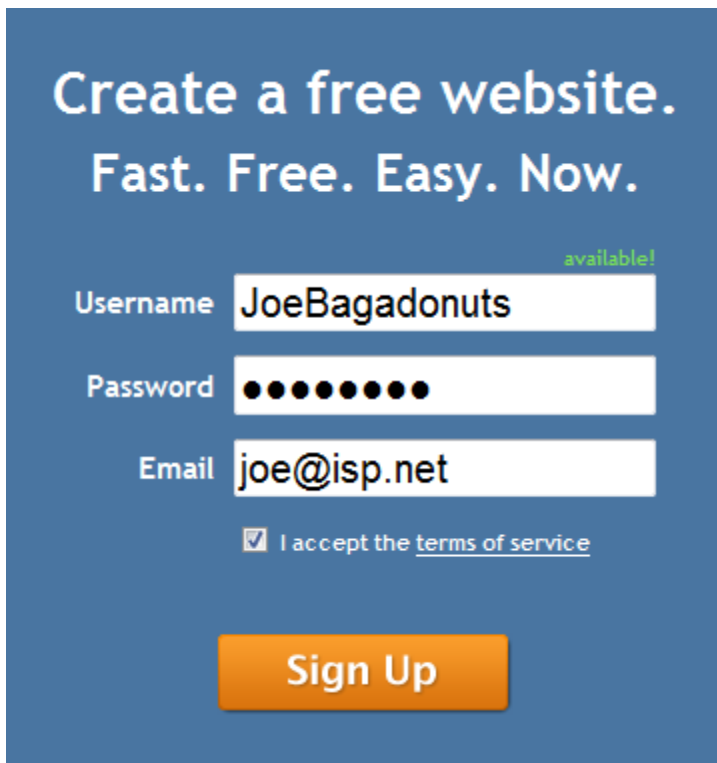

Joe got a digital picture of the Unknown Croquet Club. Since no one else in the club had taken one, Joe took one with his digital camera, uploaded it from his camera to the desktop on his computer, and named it UnknownCroquetClub.jpg.

Joe opened his Internet browser, and typed “www.weebly.com” into the Address bar at the top of the screen, and pressed the Enter key. This opened the Weebly home page.

Joe signed up for a free Weebly account by entering his name (with no spaces) as his Username, a Password that he could easily remember, and his Email address. He also checked the I-accept-the-terms-of-service box.

A blue rectangular sign-up form for Weebly. At the top, it says "Create a free website. Fast. Free. Easy. Now." in white text. Below this are three input fields: "Username" with the text "JoeBagadonuts" and a small green "available!" label above it; "Password" with ten black dots; and "Email" with the text "joe@isp.net". Below the email field is a checkbox with a checkmark and the text "I accept the terms of service". At the bottom is an orange "Sign Up" button.

Create a free website.
Fast. Free. Easy. Now.

Username available!

Password

Email

☒ I accept the terms of service

Sign Up

Note that the Username JoeBagadonuts was available! If it wasn't, Joe would have thought of different Usernames, until he found one that was available.

Joe pressed the Sign Up button, and was welcomed to Weebly.

A white rectangular welcome screen with a grey border. At the top, it says "Welcome to Weebly!" in blue text. Below this is a grey box containing the text "First, choose a title for your site." and "You can change this later, if you don't like it!". Below the grey box is a text input field containing "Unknown Croquet Club". At the bottom right is an orange "Continue" button.

Welcome to Weebly!

First, choose a title for your site.
You can change this later, if you don't like it!

Continue

Joe entered the name of his croquet club as the title of his site, and pressed the Continue button.

Weebly asked him to choose a website address.

Choose website address X

Option A: Subdomain of weebly.com

Option B: Register a new domain

http://www. .com Available

Option C: I already own a domain

Continue Cancel

Joe didn't already have a domain name, so he knew he didn't want Option C. If Joe's croquet club already had a domain name (like UnknownCroquetClub.org), then he would want Option C.

Joe could have registered a new domain name, and the domain name UnknownCroquetClub.com was available, but that would have cost a registration fee, so he didn't want Option B.

So Joe chose Option A to be a subdomain of the weebly.com domain.

Choose website address X

Option A: Subdomain of weebly.com

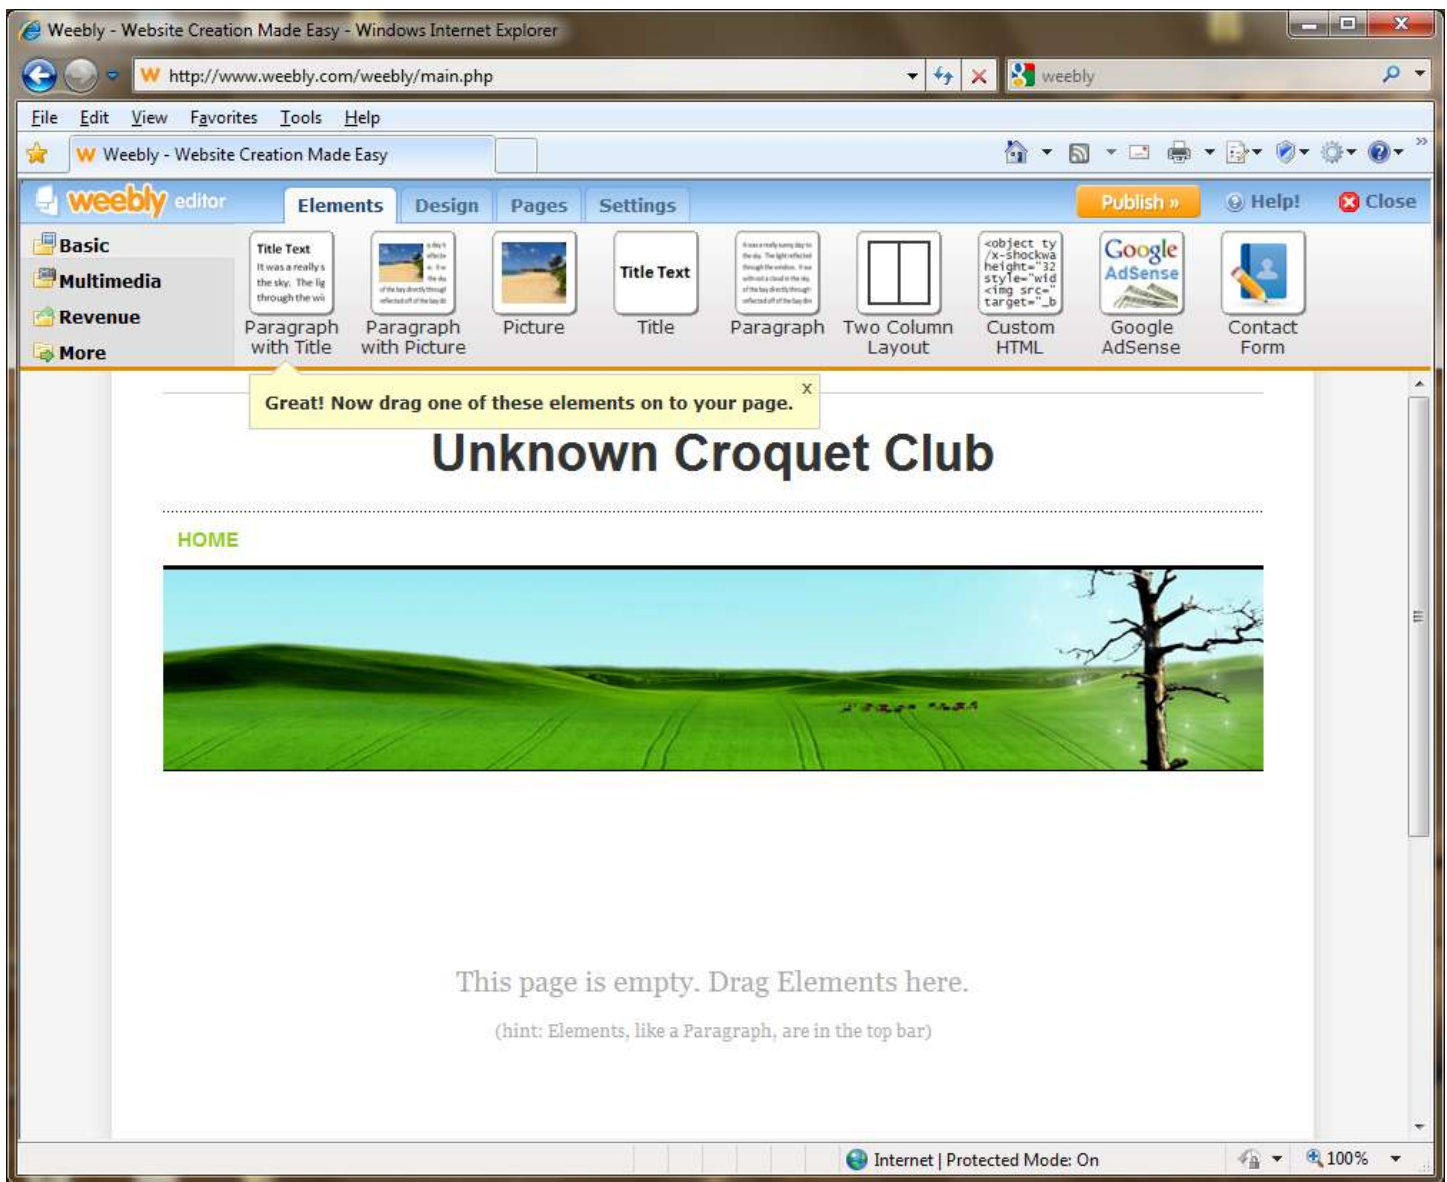

http:// .weebly.com Available

Option B: Register a new domain

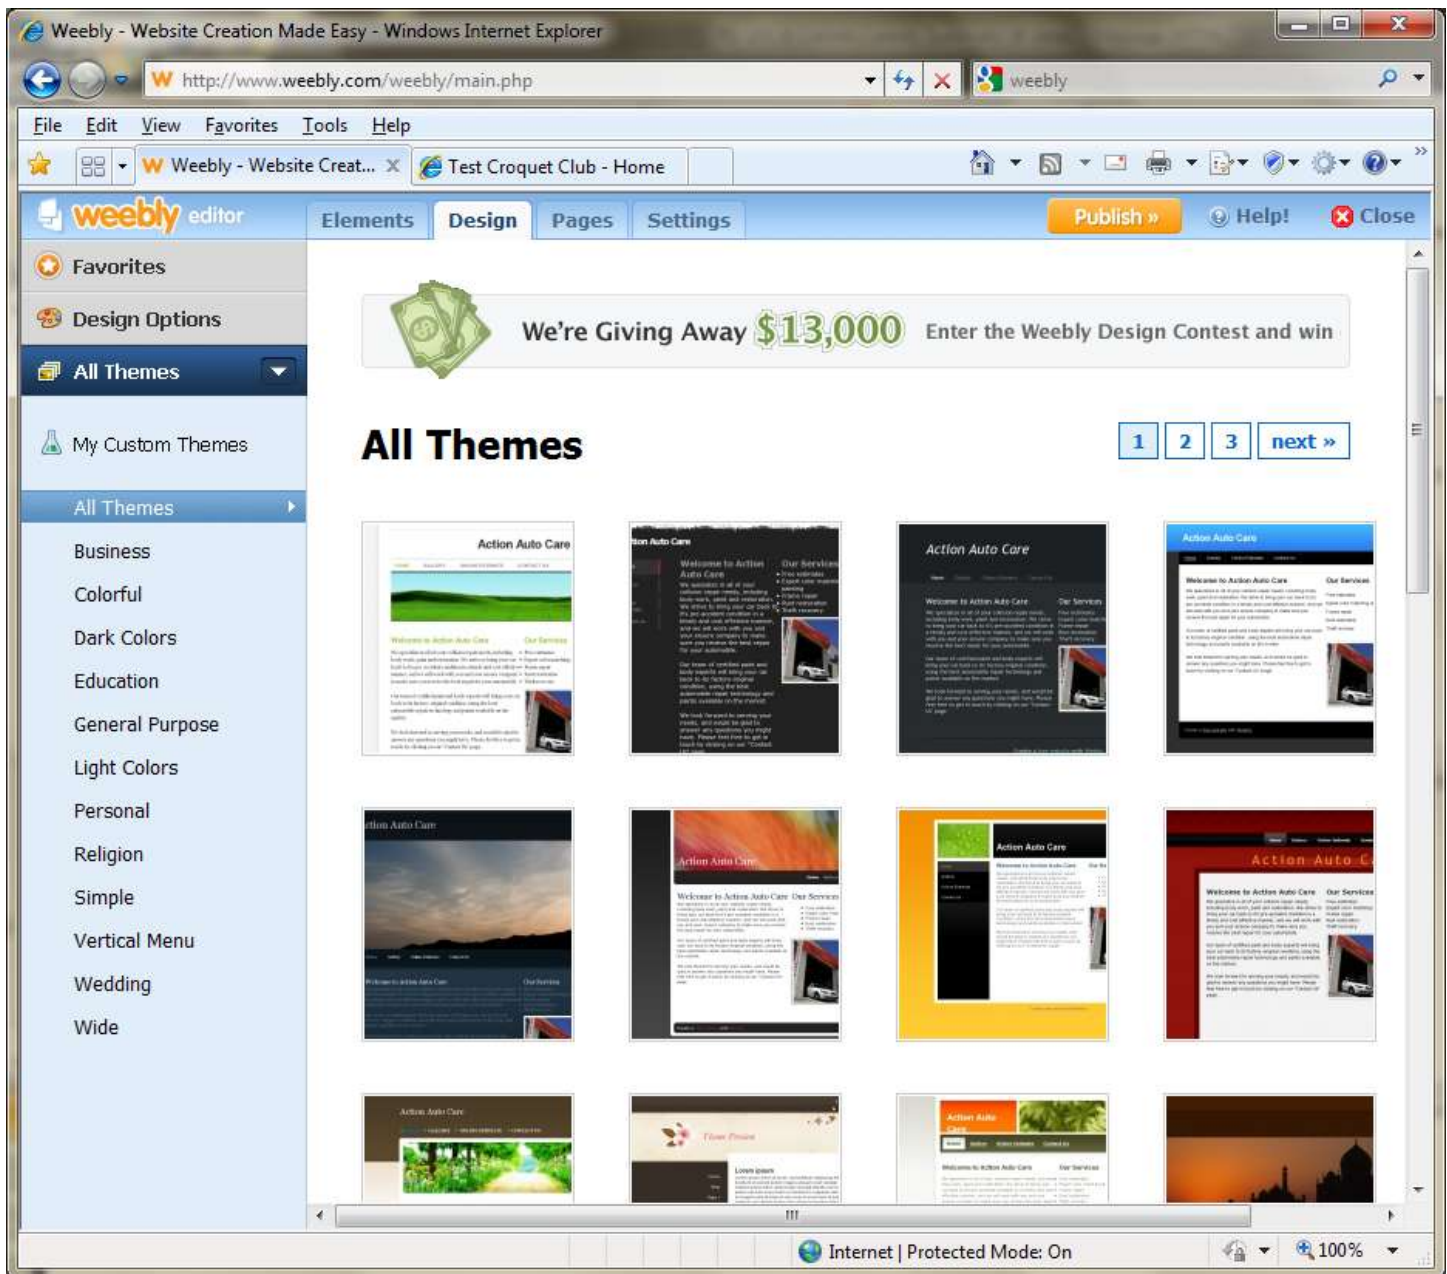

Option C: I already own a domain

Continue Cancel

Joe entered "unknowncroquetclub" as the subdomain name, because there cannot be any spaces in domain names. Then, he pressed the Continue button, and got the Weebly Editor.

Joe didn't like the default design of his website suggested by the Weebly Editor. His picture wasn't wide like the suggested picture, and he wanted a more color on the page than the one suggested. So he did not follow the instruction to drag one of these elements on to your page. Instead, he clicked on the Design tab at the top of the screen to choose a new design. Then he clicked on All Themes at the left of the screen to choose a theme for his new design.

And then Joe clicked on Colorful under All Themes on the left of the screen to find a colorful theme.

Joe liked the green theme on the right of the second row of themes. So he hovered his mouse pointer over that theme, and pressed the Preview button that appeared there.

A preview of the theme named Justin13 appeared, with the title of his website (Unknown Croquet Club) already filled in.

Joe like the look of this theme, so he pressed the Use Theme button.

Having selected the Justin13 theme for the design of his website, Joe was read to start editing the Elements on the web page.

Joe dragged a Picture from the Elements tool bar near the top of the screen, down into the empty part of the page. Then he clicked on the Sample Image (where it said Click Here to Edit).

A select-picture-to-upload window opened, in which Joe browsed to his computer's desktop, and selected the digital image UnknownCroquetClub.jpg. The Weebly Editor automatically copied that digital picture from his computer to the web page he was editing. The Weebly Editor showed a blue box around Joe's picture that he could use to move or delete the picture if he wanted.

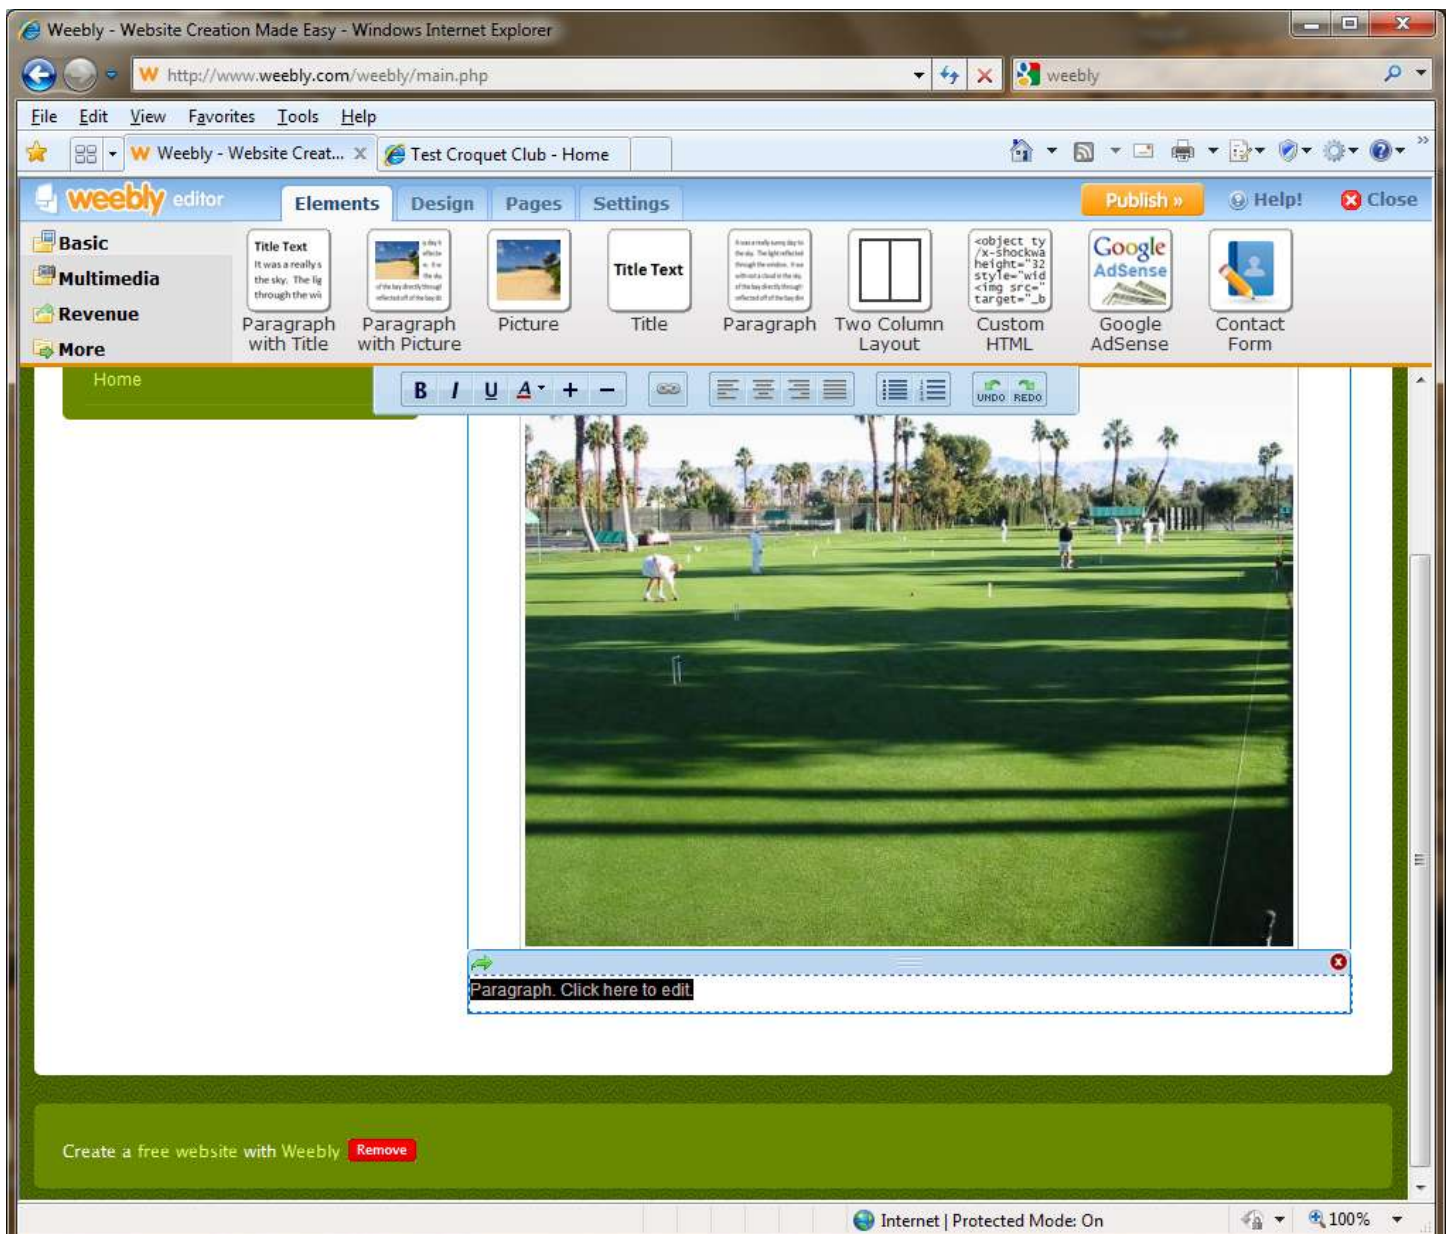

Joe wanted the picture to be bigger. So he clicked on the picture, and a little red handle appeared on the lower right corner of the picture. He grabbed (clicked and held down) the handle, and dragged it down and to the right until the picture was big enough.

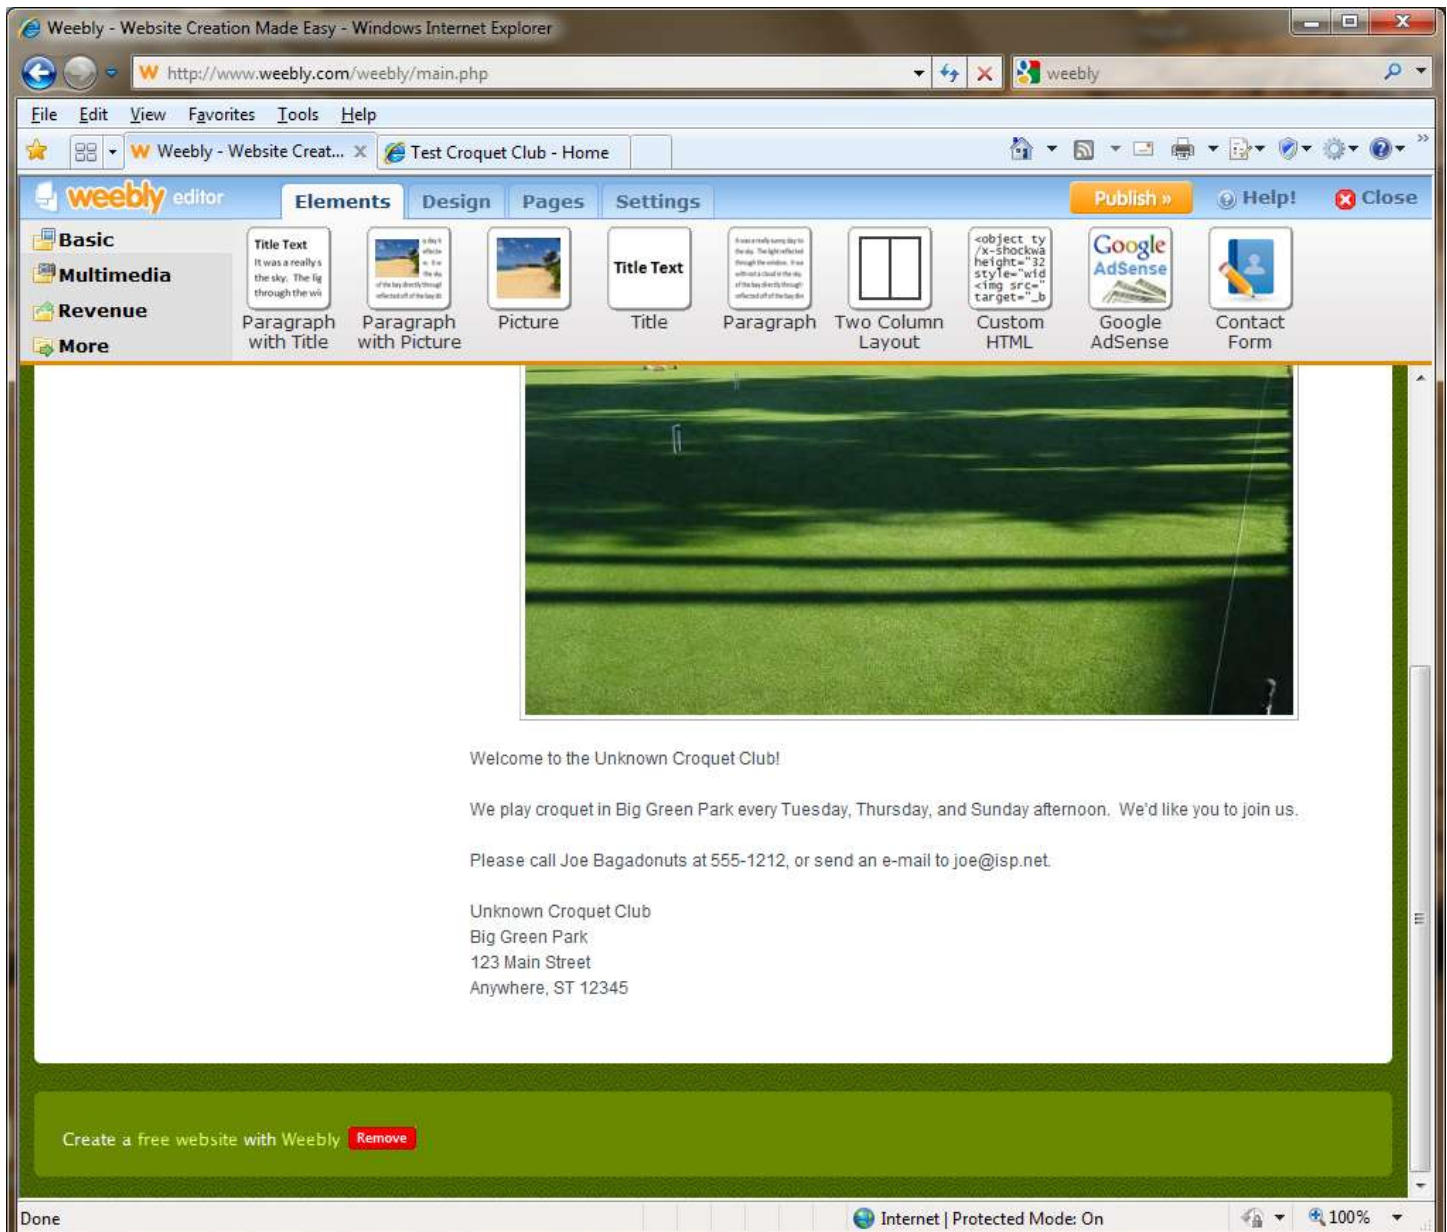

Joe was now ready to add some paragraphs of text below the picture. So he dragged a Paragraph from the Elements tool bar down below the picture on his web page. The Weebly Editor automatically put an empty paragraph there.

Joe clicked on the empty paragraph (where it said Paragraph. Click here to edit.).

The Weebly Editor surrounded the empty paragraph with a blue box that Joe could use to move or delete the paragraph if he wanted. Joe typed in the text he wanted to show on his web page into the empty paragraph.

Joe was done building his simple website!

Now he needed to publish his website on the Internet so the rest of the world could see it. He pressed the Publish button near the top of the screen. The Weebly Editor automatically put his website online, and congratulated him for successfully publishing it.

Congratulations!

X

Your site has been successfully published to:

<http://unknowncroquetclub.weebly.com>

www.unknowncroquetclub.com is also available!

www. .com ▼

Register

Let your friends know your site has been published.

Facebook ▶

Twitter ▶

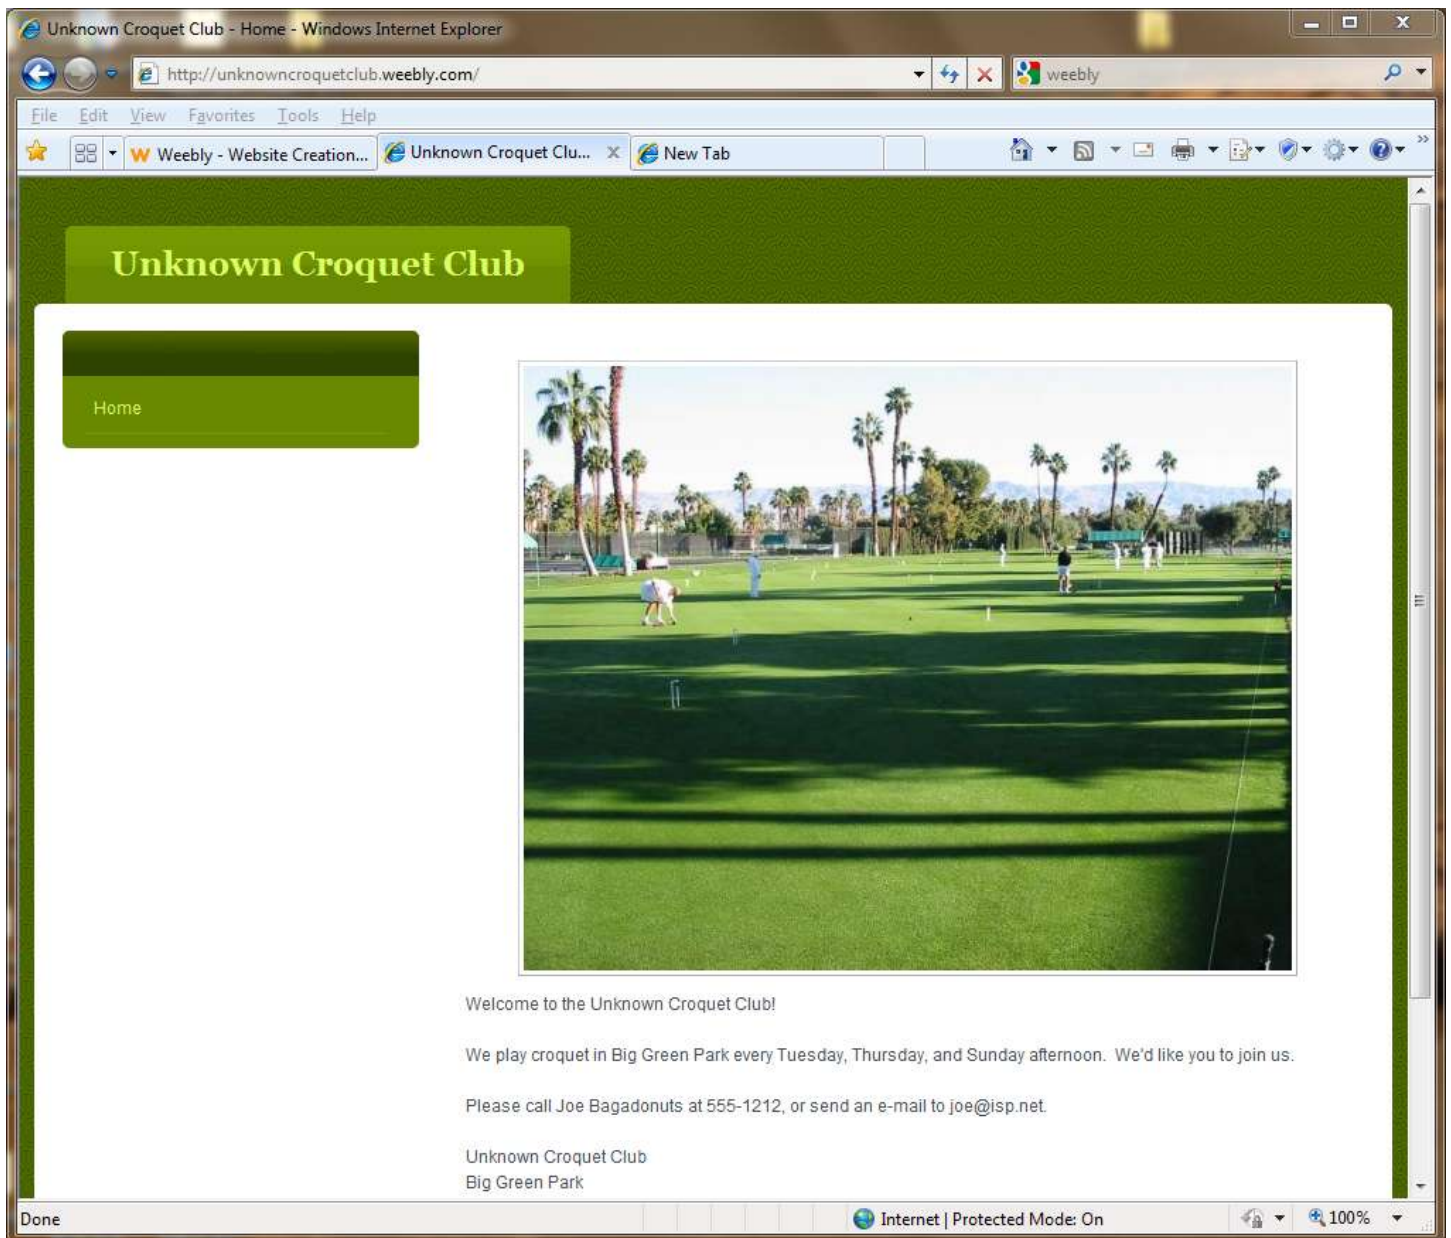

Email ▶

Joe was happy to have his website named unknowncroquetclub.weebly.com, and he did not want to spend the fee to register his website as www.unknowncroquetclub.com, so he did not press the Register button.

Joe closed the Congratulations! window by clicking on the X in the upper right corner.

Joe closed his Internet browser.

Joe wanted to see his website like the rest of the world would see it. He reopened his Internet browser, and typed “unknowncroquetclub.weebly.com” into the Address Bar, and pressed the Enter key.

And there it was!

Now you can see it too. Just open your browser to <http://unknowncroquetclub.weebly.com/>.